

A Legendarium Timeline

From the fall of Netheril and the making of Wingsong Tower to the Fables' reckoning at Thornhold — the full arc, age by age.

The Netherese Age

–339 DR & BEFORE

The sky-empire of Netheril lifts its cities on Mythallars — orbs of raw magic that quietly fray the Weave. One archmage's ambition will doom them all, and turn a border watchtower into a prison of planes.

before

del Thrysten raises Larkspur

Carrolyn del Thrysten, the youngest mage ever named to Netheril's High Council, wins fame by building a Mythallar strong enough to lift the whole floating city of Larkspur — at the cost of only a single life. At school he had befriended the exiled fey Orphan Prince of Dreams, Dante Saturnid, and the two remain lifelong research colleagues. Meanwhile House Wingsong — a mortal noble line — warns that the Mythallars invite ruin, and is exiled from Larkspur before Karsus ever works his folly, raising Wingsong Manor as their seat on the empire's western edge.

FIGURES Carrolyn del Thrysten · Dante Saturnid · House Wingsong

–339 DR

Karsus's Folly

An archmage's attempt to seize the power of the goddess of magic herself collapses the Weave. Netheril falls from the sky in an instant, and the floating city of Larkspur crashes to earth — at the very spot where the Larkspur Library will one day stand.

FALLOUT Netheril destroyed · Larkspur grounded

🦋 Per the Candlekeep Annals: the goddess of magic gave her life rather than let Karsus hold her power, and was reborn as Mystra. Arcane magic itself briefly died with her — the true cause, the Annals say, of Netheril's fall.

–338 DR

Refuge at Wingsong Manor

del Thristen and Dante lead Larkspur's shattered survivors west to Wingsong Manor — seat of the exiled House Wingsong — the one roof still standing that can shelter them. Dante's illusion magic helps hide the refugees from Netherese enemies. What starts as a plea for shelter will not stay one for long.

FIGURES del Thristen · Dante · the survivors of Larkspur · House Wingsong

–335 DR

The Feywild demiplane

Drawing on the Mythallar's intrinsic magic, del Thristen tears open a Feywild demiplane. Dante and some of the survivors move inside — and are unknowingly trapped there for years, as the plane's warped time slips out of step with the waking world.

FIGURES Dante Saturnid · trapped survivors

–328 DR

Shadowfell & the Macroscian

del Thristen opens a matching Shadowfell demiplane and tethers a Macroscian — a "Long Shadow" — within it, feeding it Larkspur's survivors to make it grow. In the same siege he kills the manor's mortal defender, Lord Val'Orea Wingsong — head of the mortal House Wingsong, not the couatl she was once believed to be. Robed monks who come seeking their lord — the early Knights of Wingsong, robed in the colors of the rainbow and couatls all, an order that predates House Wingsong itself — are turned away and told he is dead.

FIGURES The Macroscian · Val'Orea Wingsong (mortal) · the early Knights of Wingsong

–327 DR

The Infinite Planar Cyler

del Thristen completes his masterwork: a machine that blends the "dipolar" fuel of Feywild and Shadowfell into a limitless pool of mana. To power it he needs two living poles — so he betrays his oldest friend, forcing Dante into an eternal slumber as the machine's pole of light, balanced against the Macroscian's dark.

FIGURES del Thristen · Dante (light pole) · Macroscian (dark pole)

–289 DR

Shar's Shadovar repelled

The goddess Shar sends the Shadovar to find the tower. Convinced they covet the Mythallar rather than his machine, del Thristen fights them off and seals Wingsong's doors permanently — locking himself inside with his creations.

FIGURES Shar · the Shadovar · del Thristen

🦋 Per the Candlekeep Annals: Shar sheltered these very Shadovar within a hidden Shadowfell enclave, Thultanthar — the City of Shade — where they would not return openly to Faerûn for well over a thousand years.

–250 DR

The archmage unravels

del Thristen loses control of the tower's clashing illusion and planar energies. Wingsong begins flickering through planes and time, and its maker spirals into madness. By –221 DR his journals fall silent altogether.

FIGURES del Thristen · Wingsong Tower

The Long Silence

–221 → 1385 DR

For centuries the tower drifts unseen while the world forgets it. Far away, the pieces of the coming story quietly fall into place.

347 DR

Mad ramblings resume

After more than five centuries of silence, del Thristen's journals restart — but the entries are the ravings of a mind long gone, hinting that the archmage has decayed into a Nothic, a wretched thing bound to forbidden knowledge.

FIGURES del Thristen (now a Nothic)

951 DR

Tresendar Manor falls

Far from the tower, orc raids empty Tresendar Manor near Phandalin. Its cellars will sit abandoned for centuries — until they become the hideout of the Redbrands the Fables must one day clear.

PLACE Tresendar Manor · Phandalin

1372 DR

The Shadovar return

Far to the north, an old enemy stirs back into the light of day.

🐉 Per the Candlekeep Annals: the Shadovar of Thultanthar — the City of Shade, hidden away by Shar since her assault on Wingsong Tower — return openly to Faerûn after more than a thousand years of silence. Somewhere, an old goddess's patience begins to stir again.

1385 DR

The Spellplague

The Spellplague sweeps the Realms and stills the tower's magic. Dante blinks into a half-controlled dream — years later he will be reached by a young girl named Pim. The same catastrophe lets drider forces overrun the deep-gnome city of Tingstone, driving the survivors into the hidden refuge of Hideaway Bay.

FIGURES Dante · Pim · the deep gnomes of Tingstone

🐉 Emporium Conservatory archives: the Spellplague follows the murder of the goddess Mystra. The Conservatory's own troubling annotation — struck through twice, then left standing — marks this as the very year Asmodeus is recorded to ascend to full godhood.

1451 DR

Mount Hotenow erupts

Fire and ash reshape the north — and quietly set a later stage.

🐉 Per the Candlekeep Annals: the eruption devastates the Neverwinter region and empties the village of Thundertree — leaving it exactly the kind of forsaken ruin a young dragon would one day claim, and the deep gnomes would one day need cleared.

1487 DR

The Second Sundering

The world's magic steadies again, on the very eve of the Emporium's rise.

🐉 Per the Candlekeep Annals: the Weave, broken since the Spellplague, is repaired. Magic across Faerûn steadies again — just a handful of years before a wizard out of Neverwinter opens the doors of a certain Emporium.

Rise of the Emporium

~5 YEARS AGO

A wizard out of Neverwinter builds a house of wonders in Waterdeep — and makes a bargain with a fire sorceress that will echo across the planes.

Left to right: Zoey Drake, Commander of the Serpents · Damien Wingsong, Knight Commander · Finnegan Flynn, Proprietor of the Emporium · Bastion Drake, Chief of Acquisitions

~5 yrs

The Emporium is founded

Finnegan Flynn is still building his dream of the Emporium of Wonders when the Lord's Alliance calls him south to face Hariqua Na'Haran's Circle of Flame. With his three companions — Damien Wingsong, Zoey Drake, and Bastion Drake — he cuts through the cult and turns the tide of the battle in the Trollclaws.

FIGURES Finnegan Flynn · Damien · Zoey · Bastion · Hariqua Na'Haran

~5 yrs

The Wish is bargained

In the final duel amid fire and storm, Flynn halts instead of striking Hariqua down. Knowing she carries the reality-binding power of an efreeti's wish, he trades her freedom for a single immense wish — his companions folding their own into his. Publicly the cult is "broken," and Flynn is rewarded the Waterdeep barracks that becomes the Emporium of Wonders. What he truly wished for, he never plainly names — a secret that will not surface for years.

FIGURES Flynn · Hariqua Na'Haran · Lord Sildar Hallwinter

since

Hariqua's vengeance

Back in the City of Brass, the Sultan judges Hariqua weak for trading a wish for her own life. He exiles her, strips away her efreeti mantle, and lets her suffer hunger and burns she has never known — then restores her power with a command: "Conquer Flynn and make Waterdeep suffer." She returns with a cauldron of everlasting flame to rebuild the Circle of Flame.

FIGURES Hariqua Na'Haran · the Efreeti Sultan · City of Brass

The Fables

1491 DR

A new band is drawn into Flynn's orbit — and their hunt for a lost Mythallar peels back a secret older than the empires, reaching all the way to the gods.

Prologues

Oni & Hunting Flames

Bastion recruits the rogue Ty'Ny De'Ath and the blue-skinned druid Kaladin Tempest. They seize a pirate ship for the Emporium, break an Oni's grip on the magic-banning isle of Tyl Myerda, and destroy a Cult of Flame cell and its salamander near Inndale — earning their place under the Emporium's banner.

FIGURES Ty'Ny De'Ath · Kaladin Tempest · Bastion Drake

Phandalin & Wave Echo Cave

Formally hired, the Fables break the Redbrands in Phandalin, unmask Iarno "Glasstaff" Albrek as the puppet of the drow Nezznar — the Black Spider — and rescue Sildar Hallwinter. Then they wrest the lost Mines of Phandelver from the Black Spider himself in Wave Echo Cave.

FIGURES Iarno "Glasstaff" · Nezznar the Black Spider · Sildar Hallwinter

Soulfire Forge → Hamun Kost

The Fables survive their first clash with Hariqua's reborn cult at the Soulfire Forge and the tragedy of Thornhold Keep — Hariqua's assault fell first on the keep's dwarven garrison, and she slaughtered them where they stood, meaning to claim the fortress for her own. The Fables and the Emporium broke her siege, too late to save the dwarves but in time to deny her the keep. Once Hariqua fled back to the Fire Plane, Flynn himself arrived and, in a rare display of his own might, laid low the Circle of Flame's hidden caverns outright — claiming the Soulfire Forge as his prize. Then the Fables run down the Red Wizard necromancer Hamun Kost — the murderer of Moira'Val's master Peer'Na — across Triboar, seizing a book on Wingsong Tower and the fireflies that might reveal it.

FIGURES Hariqua Na'Haran · Flynn · Hamun Kost · Moira'Val · Peer'Na

🦋 Per the Candlekeep Annals: those were the shield dwarves of Clan Stoneshaft, who had held caverns beneath Thornhold — reached by a passage into the Underdark — since long before the keep briefly fell to the Zhentarim in 1368 DR. That their generations-long stewardship should end at a fire genasi's hand struck the Conservatory's scholars as a bitter, final page to a very old story — and left the Emporium as Thornhold's first uncontested holder in all its long history.

Fireflies in the Underdark

Deep beneath the world the Fables find Hideaway Bay, the last deep gnomes of drowned Tingstone. In exchange for guiding them to a new home at Thundertree, the elders share the lore of the Deepglow fireflies — the key to locating the tower — and the engineer Gypsa joins the crew, soon to captain their skyship.

FIGURES Gypsa · Chief Tackkl · the deep gnomes

Peace at Thundertree

The gnomes' promised home is not yet safe: the ruined village of Thundertree is held by a young green dragon — one of Hariqua's own cult allies. With the region already calmer after the Fables' earlier rout of the Zhentarim in Phandalin, the druid Kaladin Tempest leads the retaking, and the Fables slay the dragon. The victory gives the deep gnomes a peaceful place to settle and severs one of the Circle of Flame's alliances.

FIGURES Kaladin Tempest · the green dragon · the deep gnomes

📖 Emporium Conservatory archives, filed by Beratrymus Villium: Thundertree has stood empty and wild since Mount Hotenow's eruption devastated the region a generation past — precisely the ruin a young dragon would claim as its own. The Conservatory's notes even venture a name for the beast: Venomfang.

Ch. 7

Plague at Larkspur Heath

At Larkspur Heath the Fables find the great Library sealed and its scholars dying of a mystery poison, held by Sir Bently Rhammer on the orders of Lord Neebo Wimbleblat. The standoff turns to slaughter: Rhammer falls, the disgraced Newton Filz is exposed as a Zhentarim agent and killed, and the poison is traced to Wimbleblat-marked supplies. The librarians are healed and raised.

FIGURES Sir Bently Rhammer · Newton Filz · Lord Neebo Wimbleblat

📖 Per the Candlekeep Annals: true resurrection has lately been no simple matter across Faerûn — a death curse abroad in the world has been known to turn such magic hollow. That the Larkspur librarians rose at all, the Conservatory notes, may say something quiet about Flynn's own hand in the working.

Ch. 8

Wingsong Tower found

The Fables pass through the tower's Fey and Shadow demiplanes and destroy the Long Shadow to close the Shadowfell tear. Guided by the Raven Queen — speaking through Val'Orea Wingsong's memory — they reach the Anchor Chamber, where the awakened Dante slays his old friend del Thristen at last. The Fables escape with the Mythallar as the Zhentarim close in and seize Damien and two knights.

FIGURES The Raven Queen · Dante · del Thristen · the Zhentarim

Thornhold & the reckoning

Breaking the Zhentarim's ring, the Fables free Damien and his couatl knights — an ancient order that took the Wingsong name generations before Damien, who carries no blood tie to the family himself — and sail the Fables' Fortune home to Thornhold. There Flynn reveals the truth: he is a living dream of the primordial Jazirian, his twin is Asmodeus — also called Ahriman — and the Mythallars long ago fractured the Pact Primordial. His Wish, he admits, sought access to Ahriman's own power so he might outpace his brother and mend the Pact first — but it misfired, hinting at a missing fulcrum between their twinned natures. He had prepared for years, studying fiends and beholders whose powers echo Ahriman's — for as Jazirian's dream he is bound to pure positive energy, and feared how the Negative Energy Plane might warp him. For now the bond hides Flynn from Ahriman's sight, even as something foreboding seems to stand between them. Bastion names five gathering storms: the Silver Marches mist, the Zhentarim's Peregost, the active Well of Dragons, blood in Baldur's Gate, and Shar at the edge of sight.

FIGURES Flynn / Jazirian · Asmodeus (Ahriman) · Shar · the Peregost

🐉 Per the Candlekeep Annals: the Silver Marches have lately seen both orc-horde war and demon lords loose from the Abyss — either could be the true root of Bastion's gray mist. The Well of Dragons, meanwhile, is where the Cult of the Dragon has gathered to raise Tiamat herself from the Nine Hells — if the smoke there is theirs, that storm is graver than he knows. The Annals also whisper of a town near Baldur's Gate once dragged bodily into Avernus, Asmodeus's own dominion — a closer shadow of Ahriman than Flynn has admitted.

🐉 Emporium Conservatory archives: Thornhold has never known a quiet ownership — raised after the Second Trollwar, held in turn by Tyrran knights, a noble Waterdhavian family, and briefly the Zhentarim. But with the Stoneshaft dwarves who once held its underground halls slaughtered by Hariqua's own hand, and no rival ever enforcing an older claim, the Emporium now holds Thornhold as no one has before it — outright, and unopposed.

what comes next

The road to Warlock's Crypt

How many Mythallars survive, and where, is unknown even to the Emporium. But Flynn and Bastion have a lead: they send the Fables to parlay with Larloch, the Shadow King — the ancient lich enthroned at Warlock's Crypt near the Sword Coast. Larloch is said to hold the Moon Orb, and Flynn's company is confident the Orb is in truth a mythallar. The search continues.

FIGURES Larloch the Shadow King · the Moon Orb · the Fables

🐉 Emporium Conservatory archives: Larloch is one of the very few Netherese archwizards who survived Karsus's Folly under his own power, rather than by del Thrysten's contrivances — perhaps the only living witness to that whole age who is not a prisoner of Wingsong Tower.

